

Sarah Winnemucca: Life of a Paiute Lesson 3

Across

- [2] Natches, Sarah's _____ confronted the Umatilla Indians about their betrayal.
- [7] Sarah met Rutherford B. Hayes, the _____ of the United States.
- [8] Mattie, Sarah's _____-in-law died of cold and starvation in Yakima.
- [9] Father Wilbur was the tyrannical _____ of the Yakima agency.

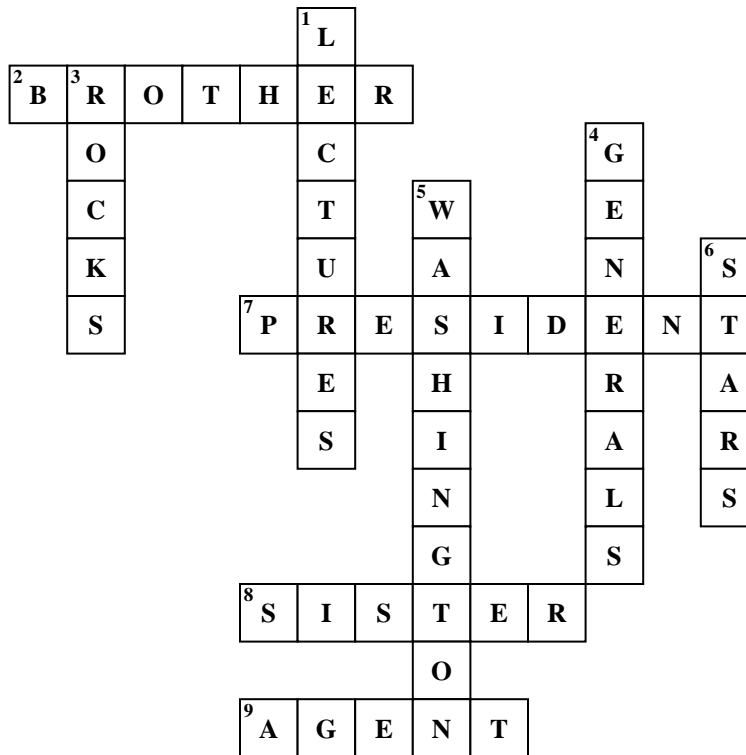

Down

- [1] When Sarah got away from Yakima, she gave _____ in San Francisco and around the west. She gained enough attention to be summoned to Washington D.C.
- [3] The Paiutes would pile _____ at the crests of hills to look like there were men waiting there.
- [4] Two army _____, Howard and McDowell, were arguing via letters about what to do with the natives of the region.
- [5] The Paiutes were ordered to travel hundreds of miles on foot in the snow to the Yakima agency in the state of _____.
- [6] The natives could travel at night by reading the _____

The program is funded in part by a grant from Nevada Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Solution

Across

- [2] Natches, Sarah's _____ confronted the Umatilla Indians about their betrayal.
- [7] Sarah met Rutherford B. Hayes, the _____ of the United States.
- [8] Mattie, Sarah's _____-in-law died of cold and starvation in Yakima.
- [9] Father Wilbur was the tyrannical _____ of the Yakima agency.

Down

- [1] When Sarah got away from Yakima, she gave _____ in San Francisco and around the west. She gained enough attention to be summoned to Washington D.C.
- [3] The Paiutes would pile _____ at the crests of hills to look like there were men waiting there.
- [4] Two army _____, Howard and McDowell, were arguing via letters about what to do with the natives of the region.
- [5] The Paiutes were ordered to travel hundreds of miles on foot in the snow to the Yakima agency in the state of _____.
- [6] The natives could travel at night by reading the _____

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT
FOR THE HUMANITIES

The program is funded in part by a grant from Nevada Humanities, and the National Endowment for the Humanities.